William Gay — Twilight - Paste

William Gay creates compound words that would make many a high school English teacher take out his or her red pen, e.g., carminesmeared and woodsmoke. However, this author can write! I loved descriptive lines such as, "There's just somethin about him that makes your skin crawl, like turnin over a rotten plank and seein one of them slick brown centipedes."

Amazon.com: Customer reviews: Twilight

Gay's fiction is almost always set in the rural South of the 1940s and 50s. This alone lends it an air of old-fashioned authenticity similar to that of William Faulkner and Flannery O'Connor. Gay's South is as darkly violent and as dirt-poor as anything by Erskine Caldwell or O'Connor. Gay's novels take the shape of coming-of-age stories. His three novels depict young idealistic boys that turn into men through a series of violent encounters in which they must make tough moral decisions to ...

William Gay (author) - Wikipedia

He'd do anything." — William Gay, Twilight. 3 likes. Like. "It was the first time they had ever talked face to face and Breece divined in a moment of dizzy revelation something about Sutter that no one had noticed before. Why, he is mad, Breece thought. He's not what people say about him at all.

Twilight Quotes by William Gay - Goodreads

William Gay's work has appeared in Harper's, The Georgia Review, and G.Q. Like Larry Brown, Gay creates deeply layered tales that plumb the depths of the human heart. The Long Home focuses on a volatile triangle of deception, love, and guilt. As Nathan Winer grows up in a rural Tennessee community, his life, and those closest to him, are touched by the evil that dwells in one ruthless and powerful man.
